Understanding Your Challenges

The communications industry operates in a unique environment, with ever-changing technologies, complex regulatory requirements and a difficult business climate. Funding sources are limited. Companies are faced with costly infrastructure changes and competition is stronger than ever. Now more than ever, management, boards of directors and investors are seeking ways to control costs, comply with regulators and move forward in an industry that is constantly fluctuating.

Experience that Counts

For more than 50 years, our professionals have worked with communications clients including wireline and wireless telecommunications companies, cable-tv and internet providers. Clients include more than 60 communication companies, many of which are mid-sized telecommunication cooperatives. From start-up ventures to long-standing operations, our professionals have expertise in this highly specialized sector of the utilities industry and have earned the respect of regulators and other governing authorities. Our team's industry group involvement and ongoing training ensures they stay up-to-date on industry issues and are able to pass along their knowledge to clients.

Why Choose Eide Bailly

Our client relationships go beyond just reviewing the numbers; clients receive senior level attention and personal service that results in strong business relationships. Eide Bailly's business model includes a high level of partner and manager involvement. This means our most experienced and forward-thinking professionals—those who have worked in the industry throughout their careers and have a strong understanding of the issues impacting communication companies—work closely with clients to best address their needs.
