Real Challenges

The construction industry operates with some of the most varied and complex challenges a business can face. Construction companies often deal with materials cost volatility, managing risks, attracting and retaining top talent, ownership transitions and ever-changing regulations—all while looking for ways to increase productivity, improve quality and enhance customer experiences in order to remain competitive.

A Focused Approach

Our professionals understand the demands and regulations you face, and can also anticipate issues to provide sound recommendations for your operation. We take a proactive approach to addressing issues, grounded in frequent communication with our clients. Our clients understand that we are there for them, and we encourage their questions.

Why Choose Eide Bailly

Eide Bailly has been serving the construction industry since 1917 and currently serves nearly 1,000 construction companies. With 25 partners and more than 75 staff members dedicated to the construction industry, members of our team are hand-chosen for their understanding of the industry. And, because our service providers dedicate extensive time to construction clients, they have the keen insight needed to identify areas for change and improvement.

Many of our clients have been with us for several generations, which is reflective of our dedication to establishing long-term relationships. We care as much about your success as you do, and strive to help you succeed in each stage of your business.

Client Perspective

“Eide Bailly provides tax planning and strategic services, as well as overall financial advice to our company. While these services are essential to run the business, I most appreciate their ability to make complex concepts easy to understand. Their staff members’ industry knowledge and calm demeanor make it easy for decisions to be formulated, which often have a significant impact on the company.”
